About :

Tyranahorse is an indie rock quintet based out of East Vancouver. Their sound has been described as the B-52's meets Jello Biafra and Janis Joplin at a dinner party with the Pixies and Kate Bush. Contemporary comparisons include You Say Party We Say Die, Mother Mother and Sunset Rubdown. Formed in 2009, Tyranahorse embraces a variety of genres from noise, grunge, blues and pop, to old country, 80's synth rock, punk and early hardcore. Instruments in their quiver include: theremin, kazoo, synth, guitar, bass, shakers, vocal loops, piano, harmonica and drums. Their song Britney Wolf was featured on CiTR's 2009 Pop Alliance Compilation.

Tyranahorse has shared the stage with Frog Eyes, Apollo Ghosts, ESL, Falcao and Monashee, Lovers Love Haters, Aunts & Uncles, Bad Fate, Greenbelt Collective and more...

**Suggested Tracks: Joy Wolf, Keep It Together, Teenage Girl*

Reviews:

“Like a hyperactive kid who forgot to take her Ritalin.” - Disorder

“The hard-rocking anthem “Keep it Together” feels like it should have been plucked from Bruce Springsteen’s ’80s songbook, with the troupe singing a refrain about pounding back Pilsners’ and whiskey shots. But things get out-there mid-song when

Sun drops a theremin solo that transports the tune out of a New Jersey dive bar and into a mad scientist’s laboratory.” – The Georgia Straight

“They could be the next big thing from Vancouver. Their set is powerful, not too experimental to alienate potential fans but not too vanilla to alienate avid music fans that are looking for something new; for a fresh sound.” – Vanmusic
